

Hi Devils,

We have some big news. In many ways this change is exciting, full of opportunity and potential. In other ways, it is heartbreaking.

We are moving Bartleby's headquarters from its birthplace in Massachusetts to northwest Arkansas. And not because we don't love the amazing community here, because we do. Your smiling faces and hungry bellies have made our first two years in operation truly magical. We feel lucky to have so many incredible people who surround and support this project. I never thought this truck would make such a big impact—but wild dreams do come true. Mine certainly did.

Arkansas provides a really unique opportunity for Bartleby's. There is a robust food truck community already established in Fayetteville, our destination, and the warmer climate will allow us to operate comfortably all year long. We are also looking to grow Bartleby's menu, and in the heart of the south we can be immersed in the type of culinary scene that inspired our first recipes. The vegan lifestyle is becoming more mainstream: there are vegan options available at many restaurants, and a fully vegan restaurant slated to open over the next few months. Though the popularity of plant-based dining is surging in Arkansas, the demand currently exceeds the supply. Enter Bartleby's.

Practically speaking, the lower cost of living provides Bartleby's the opportunity to build out a major headquarters: a location to expand into wholesale distribution, grow our online business, and establish a dedicated storefront. Arkansas also puts my partner and I hundreds and hundreds of miles closer to our families.

While I am thrilled to build a new home for Bartleby's in a place with so much opportunity for growth, I am equally sad to leave Boston. Boston is home to me, and the birthplace of Bart. I am profoundly grateful to this city and all you devils who have come by to try some nuggz, grab a Deluxe sandwich, or drizzle your meals with our scratch-made sauces.

Near the end of February, we will take approximately two months off to make the move south, set up in our new commissary, secure our location permits, and so forth. We will relaunch the online shop once settled so you can still have Bartleby's delivered right to your doorstep, wherever you're located. We also have plans to bring Bartleby's back to the northeast in a more permanent way, so this isn't goodbye. I hope to see you at our last few truck shifts, pop-ups, and cooking classes to share some smiles and say "see you later!"

xo,

Stephanie
